V. Internet Information

Agency recognizes the trust you have placed in us and the related responsibility we have regarding your financial privacy. It is Agency's responsibility to keep your sensitive financial and personal information confidential. Agency has always had formal procedures to help protect your privacy.

With the surge in Internet use, it has become even more crucial that steps are taken to assure you that your private information remains private. Agency Privacy Policy include: a) website security, b) website privacy and c) control over your personal information.

A. Website Security

Agency has implemented technology to assure you that any sensitive personal information you provide us or any account information you receive on-line is managed in a safe and secure manner.

Additionally, procedures have been implemented to assure you that only authorized Agency employees may view the information you share. This is accomplished by limiting access to that information (via access capability and password control) to only those employees having a legitimate business purpose for viewing your information and responding to your inquiries.

B. Website Privacy

The Agency site includes sections that are public and areas that are password protected.

When any person visits the public areas of the website, certain basic information may be collected, such as how many people visited the site and what pages were visited.

Unlike the personal information that you provide and view (which is subject to the security procedures described above), all of the information gathered in the public areas of the website is general. This general information is used to determine which parts of the Agency website are most popular and how people access them. The information gathered will help improve the content in the web-related pages and assist Agency in our continuing efforts to improve service to all customers.

Also included in the Agency website is the capability for you to correspond with the Agency. This correspondence may be for the purpose of asking general questions, requesting literature or responding to other promotions. E-mail addresses from those who correspond with Agency are collected, along with any other information you provide, for example site registration or survey information.

Whether or not you are a customer of Agency, personal information will be collected from you if, and only if, you voluntarily provide that information. The Agency Privacy Policy prohibits any sale or rental of customer information to any nonaffiliated third party for marketing purposes.
